The Lively

OF LIFE AT

Whether it means listening to a Beethoven symphony, sketching a landscape, or experimenting with a new hair-do and an exciting shade of lipstick, every day at college has its quota of art experiences. Important as are all the arts to living, none adds more zest to college days and a warmer glow to their memory than the Lively Arts.

The perils of exam week, the exhilaration of College Night, the delicious pleasure of midnight feasting, all the traditions and customs that give life at Alabama College its intriguing personality ---these are the Lively Arts.

To get in tune with the spirit of the Lively Arts is to make dullness an exile and every day of our college lives an adventure.

THE 1941 MONTAGE Orchid GOES TO . . .

To the . . . .

Teacher who makes history, economics, and politics as vital as tomorrow's bread and butter . . . .

Friend whose enthusiastic interest in the students, whose encouraging smile and never-failing sense of humor buoy our spirits and put things in their right proportion . . . .

Artist whose masterpiece in living is the inspiration of every Alabama College girl.

Dr. Hallie Farmer

A NEW NAME

"the Montage"

The scene was student body meeting, and the skirmish was on! The issue—Do you favor changing the name of the yearbook from Technala to Montage?

Only one word of the question was new, because "Let's change the name of the Technala to something else," had served as a conversational item for years. But when somebody suggested Montage as a substitute for "something else," it gave the old question a new twist.

With the staff pulling the new name along by main force, Montage sailed by the Publications Board, and negotiated that Scylla and Charybdis of all good ideas—the Senate and Exec Board. Then after expected tugs and pulls, with everybory sassing everybody else in student body meeting, it was two yeas to a nay for Montage. That's quite a victory, even for an abstraction.

And so in 1941 Montage replaced Technala just as in 1911 Technala replaced Chiaroscuro when the name of the school became Alabama Girls' Technical Institute. The reasons for both changes have been the same—that the name was no longer appropriate to the school and its work. Technala with its suggestion of merely technical training was not suitable to Alabama College where the liberal arts curriculum is playing an increasingly important role from year to year.

The cutter's dictionary defines Montage as "The art of assembling the elements that make up a moving picture—strips of film bearing photographic images, the dialogue . . . in a flowing continuity that will produce the desired effect upon the audience." Since the purpose of the yearbook is to present a picture of college life, we feel that Montage is appropriate and will add new grace and charm to the book.

Dr. Harman gave the new name his blessing and supplied a definition of his own—"the collection, aggregate, or sum total of things in or arising from the relationships among students, college staff and others who constitute the college community familiarly known as Montevallo."

on an OLD Campus

The year 1896 is inscribed on the College seal; our King House, once a mansion, is 118 years old; Reynolds saw a regiment in gray receive a flag made by the women of Montevallo; Main Dormitory once housed the President's office and Library of the College. Although its campus has grown to be one of the most modern in the state, Alabama College has always preserved the same ideals of truth and service.

PALMER HALL

TUTWILER HALL

A fitting addition to the renowned dignity of the seniors is their new dormitory where the automatic elevator and Fun Room are no small attraction.

One of the most delightful spots on the campus is this garden at the President's home where a hearty welcome, as well as your favorite flower, is always assured.

A CORNER OF THE GARDEN AT FLOWERHILL

REYNOLDS HALL

Even with its new face, Reynolds still keeps the spirit of its glamorous history. Named for the first president of the College, it was built by slave labor in 1851, and served as an emergency hospital during the Civil War. Today after being completely remodeled, it has become our College Union Building.

With all its air of medieval mystery suggestive of some poetic legend, the Tower must confess a rather prosaic biography. It was put up in 1910 by the Piedmont Construction Company and has served as a water reservoir ever since. But as a stimulus to imagination it is unexcelled.

With its big lecture hall, sound-proof broadcasting studios, classrooms, and faculty offices still shining with newness, Comer houses more departments than any other building.

GOVERNOR FRANK M. DIXON

The GOVERNOR

"The State has a stake in you . . ." That was the theme of Governor Dixon's remarks when he spoke at our Exercises of Dedication last April. He continued, "The State is proud of you. The State is glad to have an opportunity to help fit you by education that you may realize and love the finest things of human existence . . . We are not trying to tie you by any ties of gratitude at all. That is not it. But we are trying to tie you by the realization that your existence here among your own people will mean the finest and fullest fruition of life for you."

Our PRESIDENT

DR. A. F. HARMAN

A pipe, a cane, and a boutonniere are characteristic of this southern gentleman who staunchly asserts in original verse that his daughters of the state are not "a rag, a bone, and a hank of hair."

Smoking his favorite English Dunhill pipe, swinging a tan cane, and wearing a geranium in his buttonhole, Dr. Harman may be encountered any day walking briskly to work, surveying the grass (of which he is a stern defender), or chatting with students. During his term of office, six years to be exact, he estimates he's walked more than four thousand miles on this campus, and traveled many thousand more in the interest of the College.

His position as President of Alabama College is the most recent step in a career during which he has held almost every position in the State's educational system. He cherishes the philosophy that the pupil and teacher are the center of education and urges that it be the basis of relationships between his faculty and student body.

A phenomenal memory, an ability to write, and an enviable style of oratory have made him a favorite speaker on state occasions.

During his leisure time he plays bridge, reads extensively, talks with friends and composes verse. The trite term "southern hospitality" becomes a sudden and unusual reality when he is receiving guests, for either at home in Flowerhill or behind the office desk he plays admirably the role of host.

DEAN NAPIER and MR.

His chief occupation is distributing peace of mind to harassed students. He has very little to do besides being Dean of the College, teaching psychology, president-ing a bank, chairman-ing a board of stewards, grand master-ing a lodge, and teaching a Sunday School class. Due, doubtless, to his excess of spare time, it is possible to go to see the Dean, and really see him.

He likes people and his pipe. He says he talks too much, but has never been found with an unwilling audience. He is fond of good music and Chinese checkers, although he never wins, that is, hardly ever. His favorite radio personalities are Charlie McCarthy and Walter Winchell. He is unique in that he doesn't think the younger generation is going to the dogs, and on the contrary, thinks the classes improve each year, even the seniors. Quite apart from being invaluable to the College in his official capacity, students would approve of his being here, "just to talk to" as a cure-all for the well-known "blues" that hit most of us at one time or another.

WILLS

What the quartermaster is to an army, Mr. Wills is to Alabama College, and that is—indispensable! From test tubes to tons of coal, he orders practically everything for the College, pays the bills, and at the end of the month makes the books balance.

His life seems to have been inextricably bound with colleges and books—for he was brought up in Auburn and began his career here as professor of history in 1909, becoming Head of that department and doing his business managing on the side. As the College expanded and this work expanded, he reluctantly put aside the role of instructor to be full time business manager.

His advice to the three publications is exceptionally helpful, for the editors and business managers always take it and come back for more.

Golf and bridge are his recreation, and once with Dean Napier he maintained a private golf course. He reads constantly—everything from biographies to pulp.

He says he gets one of his biggest thrills from shaking hands with the alumnae when they return to the campus. Even though you can't get him to admit having "a proudest moment of his life," maybe having this year's College Night dedicated to him might help fill that vacancy.

We Dedicate . . .
TUTWILER and COMER

The two new additions to the Alabama College family of buildings, Julia Strudwick Tutwiler Hall and Braxton Bragg Comer Hall, had been honored by august names, and a day in Spring was set aside to dedicate them. When the day came, we had with us an Alabama Governor, a U. S. Senator, a State Superintendent of Education, the distinguished son of B. B. Comer, and the equally distinguished nephew of Miss Julia Strudwick Tutwiler, to say nothing of the government representatives, and our architects and contractors.

Classes were suspended and students, faculty and guests trooped to Palmer where activities for the day were centered. In a sense, everybody in Alabama was our guest for all could tune in the impressive exercises on the radio at home.

Donald Comer talked of a father who worked for what he believed, and Governor Comer believed with Daniel Webster that "if we work upon minds; if we imbue them with principles, with a just fear of God and our fellowman, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity."

Gessner T. McCorvey told about "Miss Julia," his aunt, who got from the legislature whatever she went after, and what she went after ranged from the right of girls to higher education to drastic prison reforms.

Supt. A. H. Collins made attending classes seem a privilege for "such training is training for leadership."

Senator Hill made us proud of as well as grateful to the Federal Government for its contributions to our College.

The academic procession enters Palmer Hall for the Exercises of Dedication.

HALLS

Our quiet-spoken Governor told us simply, directly and with great sincerity of the problems which Alabama faces—and our responsibility toward their solution.

That night Nino Martini sang for us. And the next morning we got up and went to classes.

Mr. Donald Comer, with Gladys Fuller and Nell Wooten, inspects the broadcasting studios in Comer Hall.

Mrs. B. B. Comer seated with Mr. B. B. Comer, Jr. in Tutwiler parlors on Dedication Day.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN must have been a thinker, for he didn't get those magnificent forehead lines chopping rails. Examination week furrows foreheads too—a period when hair is torn, midnight oil is squandered, and sleepless eyes stare blankly across the whole field of knowledge.

It doesn't take a psychoanalyst or an intricate meter to predict that the mind-probing season is at hand. Late coffee odors trail down the halls. Unanswered questions and vague mumblings hang disconsolate in the air as harassed scholars count out causes, effects, and "four reasons why—." "Have you studied?" or "I haven't cracked a book!" become the sum total of conversation—as the drive for knowledge begins.

Preparing for study is a ritual lacking no minute detail of adjustment for those about to engage in the process of digesting dates, notes, and statistics. The victims follow their own bent—some with feet slanted skyward and backbone contacting chairs only along the seventh vertebra; others optimistically crawl in bed, open their books, and sleep with printed page pressed against their craniums, praying for osmosis to take place. Then there's the conscientious type who sit rigidly upright with their feet parallel on the floor, just daring nature to drag them into the Land of Nod.

With the last frantic scribble after the bell, the mental grip relaxes. In a flash the mind obsessed with Vitamin B_1 switches to chocolate sundaes, and the image of Napoleon dissolves into Charles Boyer's soft mutterings. Energy tautly mobilized for thought suddenly finds a dozen outlets more congenial and—pass or fail—there comes that half-hysterical but delicious moment of release.

Fresh—men come in the fall, pour from college busses and taxis to survey Main Dormitory with an awed but critical eye. Like the good intentions of a hundred fussy mother hens, they are pounced upon by a swarm of white dresses, each having a blurred but somehow similar face and all asking polite, meaningless questions.

Then comes orientation with all its meanings for these gullible, eager beginners. After the first day they are saddled with the idea that "orientate" means party, sleep, and then party again, or else they've come to the conclusion that to be orientated is to learn how to stay "how do you do" to endless hordes of upperclassmen. A mutual understanding of the word is that it's everything from a psychology test to a splash party at the pool.

Right at first about all these soft-spoken youngsters ask of life is to be allowed to sit back and regard the endlessly amazing and unpredictable capers of the upperclassmen. But there comes a time when all the humble pie has been eaten, and they realize that the school paper can even use their work; dramatics aren't just for the sophomore Bernhardts; that their backhand is good enough to show in public. Homesickness having reared its ugly head is cleanly decapitated and gone are the teary epistles to mother. Gone is the "fresh" from freshman and in its place is an organized body of determined females finally beginning to feel their oats.

All is strictly business in Chemistry lab.

CLASS ADVISORS

Dr. Katherine Vickery, Chairman
Miss Elisebeth Conn
Dr. John Knox

It usually takes the sophomores about two weeks each fall to realize they are sophomores. After that it's just too bad . . .

They deem it their solemn duty to protect the freshmen, aid the juniors in their search for the Crook, and just barely tolerate the dignified seniors whose lofty position on the campus they alone don't envy. Pride of the faculty, whose whims and fancies they've learned to humor, and joy of the cooks, whose food they simply adore, the sophomores have perhaps the happiest philosophy of all the classes.

The freshmen have an idea that the principal function of sophomores—besides browbeating freshmen—is to help freshmen to fill up Main Dormitory. The freshmen get the impression that sophomores are our best informed group (an opinion they would not dispute!) until along in March comes those ego-deflating "general culture" exams. Then it takes Miss Vickery just two days to make them properly humble again.

It comes as a surprise to an already groggy campus when these erstwhile scatterbrains troop to the polls as seriously as you please and elect their junior officers. Then the masks come off and—what a relief to find that being sophomores is only a phase from which practically every one of them recovers.

CLASS ADVISORS

Miss Mary Decker, Chairman
Dr. E. C. Reinke
Dr. Frances McGehee

Having successfully coped with reading reports, term papers, and themes for two years, the jaunty junior goes to her classes with new confidence. But she soon begins to wonder why she ever thought those first two years were hard work. After her first course in education, she discourses learnedly—usually in the presence of underclassmen—on transfer of training and the merits of progressive education.

Except for wondering occasionally what it will feel like to be a senior, she seldom thinks past the next holiday until suddenly her budget of time and energy is interrupted by spring elections. Then politics becomes all-absorbing—she searches the roll to see who will make the best president of what; she circulates petitions; votes; waits for returns; and finally decides that these are the best officers ever installed. Before Crook Week she becomes very polite to seniors. She giggles nervously at Crook Court and hopes they won't really make her sing "The Wise Old Owl" before the student body. She rises at 5:00 A. M., looks repeatedly in the same places for the crook, consults the Ouija board, joins the jubilation when the crook is found and she at last has senior privileges and a chance to sleep eight hours.

Miss Blazek's meal-planning class shows some results.

Some of those "daughters of feminine grace."

CLASS ADVISORS

Miss Eva Golson, Chairman
Mr. J. H. Henning
Mrs. Isobel Bruce

After three months of savoring the glories of her new state, the senior comes back to school determined to make this the most memorable of her four years. As the taxi goes past Main she can't help remembering how scared she was the first time she walked up those steps, and she wonders who will have her old room. For the first time at the Student Government reception comes the thought that haunts other gala affairs—I won't be doing this again. On Founders' Day she revels in her image arrayed in cap and gown, and when the processional begins she hopes she looks as imposing and academic as she did looking in the mirror. Practice teaching and Block Ed keep her busy staying one jump ahead of her pupils' questions and trying to find out how to make them interested enough to keep asking. She enjoys her position of leadership and presides with great ceremony, but before she realizes it, everyone is speculating about who her successor will be. With the first bud of spring she begins to visualize her hat for the Dean's tea. The senior ball, the President's reception, the Governor's reception, parties, luncheons, teas—it all becomes one whirling round of gaiety until the great day arrives. Then with wobbly legs—not to mention emotions—she walks across the stage, and writes finis to four years when she gets her long coveted diploma from Mr. Harman.

Secretaries of the machine age.

CROOK

"When juniors reach the point in their college careers when it seems fitting to assume the weighty role of seniors, they must establish their fitness for the honor by finding the Crook." So readeth the handbook as to the purpose of Crook Week.

Although outwardly this Crook is distinguished from other crooked sticks only by a coat of varnish, it is the symbol of the dignity and responsibility of being seniors.

In order that they may fully impress the juniors with the gravity of their transformation, the seniors proclaim a solemn Crook Court in Palmer. There her majesty, the senior class president, informs the lowly juniors that they shall be demoted to freshman rank until the Crook is found. She then admonishes them as to their duties.

Weed ought to look happy—she found the Crook and ended the misery of her despairing classmates.

The seniors of 1940 decreed that the whole junior class to a woman should assemble at an appointed hour and thoroughly cleanse the boardwalk in front of Tutwiler. They patrolled the boards to see that soap flakes and toothbrushes were briskly applied.

Frances shows her stuff with a toothbrush.

WEEK turn Juniors into Seniors

During these days of telling strain, the juniors must retire at an early hour in order to begin their diligent search each morning at 5:00 A. M., and continue at every free hour until they find the sacred Crook.

The activities of their leisure moments are rigidly regulated by the seniors who utilize their services for shoe polishing, mail fetching, entertainment, and generally worthwhile tasks.

Finally just as the victims are beginning to doubt that the phantom Crook ever existed, some girl takes just one more look—and there it is where every other junior had looked before. After a bedlam of feminine shrieks and a wildly ringing bell announce the news to the campus, there is a mad rush to Tutwiler to see the finder crowned heroine of Crook Week.

Hard upon the midnight hour after calm has returned, the seniors call the last court to punish misdemeanors and to give the new senior class president the ring and pin.

Stricken juniors make white the shoes and spotless the path of the seniors.

IT'S LIKE the breathless lull before the hurricane when the barometer sinks low and the air is tense with unpredictable things to come. No falling barometer marks the coming of College Night, but the pent-up enthusiasm which precedes it is very much like a hurricane, and when it strikes, eight hundred Alabama College students are suddenly galvanized into terrific action.

The glamorous Cleopatra and Helen of Troy have been good box office for thousands of years, but their successes pale into nothing beside the four lassies who command the cohorts of Purple and Gold.

Climax pyramids on climax. After lists are posted, there is a wild rush for the bulletin boards by a pushing, scrambling mass of girls, eager to learn which camp will command their loyalty. And then the demand for ribbon takes a sharp up-swing as Purples and Golds identify themselves.

The tide rises—paper, ink, and ideas are splashed together, notes are penned on bars of music, hammers punish nail heads, needles fly—and finally directors, lighters, stagers, costumers all pool their efforts to furnish background for actresses to emote or crumple the onlookers with mirth.

One half doesn't know how the other half lives, while Purple and Gold whisperings go on behind closed doors. Only pep is common property. The Golds astound their rivals with a new song and the Purple retaliate with the latest streamline yell. And so, on the great night, when acrobatic cheer leaders wave their arms, hundreds of well-trained voices give utterance to their deepest emotions with "Yea Golds!" or "Yea Purples!"

When the last curtain is drawn, the last act done, the last word spoken—there comes the moment dreaded and cherished by all—the decision. When the fateful "Gold" or "Purple" is spoken, Palmer becomes unbalanced emotionally—on one side bedlam reigns as the victorious damsels embrace each other and shriek their joy, on the other side girls march soberly but cheerfully out, confident of a job well done.

The hurricane has approached, worked itself to a furious climax, and then died to a gentle breeze, ever ready to whip into gale-like fury again next year with new leaders and new faces.

The big moment past, no girl escapes the sober exaltation that has come from merging her talents into the mighty group effort we call College Night—bigger than any of us—good for all of us.

THE ART OF

SWINGING INTO COLLEGE NIGHT

STUDENT Government

By means of the Student Government Association, citizens of Alabama College assume responsibility for their own conduct and for enforcing the standards which have been set up. The Executive Board is composed of members from each class and house presidents of dormitories and cooperative houses, whom the students elect to represent them. Under the able leadership of Margaret Stallworth, the Board has completed a very successful term. Due to the cooperation of students and efficiency of the Board, the administration of law and order has been overshadowed by other functions.

After assisting with Orientation it gave a program for the benefit of the freshmen, "Glimpses of College Life," which turned out to be a fake broadcast. This was followed later by the Student Government reception for students and faculty. At Christmas the Board sent a delegate to the Conference of The National Student Federation of America at New Brunswick, N. J. In the spring it entertained the faculty advisors and incoming members at a dinner.

MARGARET STALLWORTH, President of Student Government.

COLLEGE NIGHT

Top: Mutual congratulations of Nell Wooten, leader of the Purples, and Jean Farr, leader of the Golds . . . Middle: The winnahs! The ballots say that Ann Canon and Nell Wooten will lead the Purples, Jean Farr and Bitsy Robbins, the Golds . . . Bottom: The cost of costumes and scenery have a sobering effect on Sara Barclift, Business Manager of the Golds and Mary Scott Howell, Business Manager of the Purples.

College Night! Marvel of all-student originality and planning, outstanding event of the college year, climax of all student activities—search Webster for superlatives, it deserves them all.

From the first performance which was given as a kind of stunt night in the dining room, College Night has become such a finished performance and has grown so in popularity over the State that it is presented now on two successive nights to capacity audiences.

The twenty-third annual College Night, from the first curtain to the decision, was tops in thrills and excitement. The Purples, after winning the tea dance, basketball game and French College Night, carried off the final victory after three years of unprecedented Gold successes.

The applause from the student body put the seal of approval on the dedication to Mr. E. H. Wills for his years of service to Alabama College.

The spirit of College Night caught in one shot—all the candidates congratulate Jean and Nell after an exciting election.

is a Gala Affair . . .

The Gold staging crew puts up a set in a record number of seconds . . . Golds paint flats in the scenery shop . . . Give it to me! Yea, Purples! . . . Butch lights the Purple performance . . . It takes two to grow them thar' whiskers!

a four year Losing Streak

With Nell Wooten and Ann Canon as leaders and Happy Bonfire (he might be almost any animal) as mascot, the Purples set their hearts on winning, and did! Mysticism and madness—just such a contrast were the impersonation and stunt. The adaptation, "Alice Pyncheon," taken from an incident told in The House of Seven Gables, was set in storied New England. "Mountain Madness," a saga of mountaineers, was a fast-moving drama following Sheriff Callahan's trip to a sheriffs' convention in Bullitsville and of his attempt to modernize Cross Corners. Add to this a pep song with clever rhymes and varied rhythms. a slow song pledging both sides to loyalty to Alma Mater, and an orchestration of "Songs My Mother Taught Me"—and you have a grade A program.

The wedding scene from the impersonation . . . Why that thar' boy's too lazy even to git in the feuding . . . Jedge Callahan unites Myrie Belle and Ezra in holy padlock . . . "Alice! Alice, you are falling asleep." . . . Wildcat Tom in a wild moment.

AND THE GOLDS . . .

are Game Losers

Whatever vitamins are necessary for pep, the Golds really had them. With Jean Farr and Bitsy Robbins in command, the Golds helped make this College Night unforgettable. The Gold slow song got the program off to a tuneful start. The pep song traced the story of music from the dull scales of Grandma's day to the ASCAP-B. M. I. fracas. Ultra harmonious was the Gold glee club's medley based on a theme from the "New World Symphony." Take famous women of history from Eve to Emily Post and place them together under Satan's jurisdiction in the lower world, and nothing but a hilarious stunt could be the result. The impersonation, "The Lady with the Lamp," could only be the story of Florence Nightingale. The sets, costumes, the lines, the final scene showing a large red cross flanked with nurses in white made the impersonation a dramatic triumph.

One of the nurses tells Miss Nightingale about new difficulties at the hospital in the Crimea . . . Jean leads the slow song . . . "Breathe life into my cross." . . . Eleanor Roosevelt and Queen Elizabeth mix it as badly as the Golds did their history . . . Fanny Brice looks on aghast while the cave-woman claims another victim.

The STUDENT SENATE

LUCILE WEAVER
President of the Senate.

The Senate which is composed of representatives elected from each class is primarily concerned with encouraging the best college spirit and raising the standards of conduct and achievement.

With Lucile Weaver as president, the Senate has added to its usual activities several new functions. A new committee from the Senate has been put in charge of ushering for the Concert Lecture Series and other public performances. Members of the Senate have acted as hostesses to groups of high school seniors who were invited to several concerts and College Night. This group has also sponsored the Alabama Institute of Student Opinion, which was set up to test student opinion on questions of interest.

PRAYS FOR SUNSHINE ON May Day

The Queen leaves her throne with all her attendants.
The dancers pause at a high point.

A brilliant affair was this May Day which the sun really shone on. The purple and white of the College seal, which was the background of the court, was repeated in the costumes of the Honor Group—while the attendants in yellow, blue, green, and pink added color to the scene.

"The Rebirth of Peace" was the theme of the program. The dance group gave an interpretation of the struggle and final victory of grace, thought, and wisdom over war and misunderstanding. Following the dance Vandalyn Lazenby portraying Grace and Beauty, and Celia Methvin as Thought and Wisdom led the procession of attendants and Honor Group to the throne where Betty Archibald, President of the Senate, did the honors.

Work and Play

The Young Women's Christian Association is one of the biggest organizations on the campus—and one of the busiest. It is a feat just to remember the activities of the Y, but Gladys Fuller, as president, has directed them all very competently. The cabinet which is made up of all the officials and committee chairmen has worked with her untiringly to adapt the Y program to the needs of the students.

After assisting the other organizations with Orientation, the Y. W. C. A. entertained all Sis-Majors and Sis-Minors with a kid party.

The Y. W. C. A. sponsors morning watch in all the dormitories, a Vesper Service on Sunday afternoon, and maintains smaller organizations in the classes. This year the Senior Seminar was responsible for the marriage relations course for seniors. In October Dr. Edgar R. Neff of Montgomery was invited to conduct Religious Emphasis Week.

At Christmas the Y provided the tree in front of Main where the girls gathered to sing Christmas Carols. It also gave the annual party for the servants.

The Tea Room, which is second in popularity only to the Post Office, furnishes those off-hour snacks as well as funds for a scholarship. Every other Thursday night in Main all students gather to warble their favorite songs at Step-Singing.

In the spring, the Y. W. C. A. headed the drive for the World Student Service Fund.

Mr. E. H. Wills, Financial Advisor, and Mr. Shelby Southard, Literary Advisor of the Publications Board.

The Publications BOARD

The Student Publications Board with Mr. Wills as financial advisor, and Mr. Southard as literary advistor, has the guardianship of the three student publications, the Alabamian, Montage, and the Tower. This board elects editors and business managers of the publications, approves contracts and budgets, and comes to the aid of its wards in any of their difficulties. With Mary Scott Howell as chairman, the Board has held regular meetings to which officials of the publications were invited in order to discuss any of their problems with the group.

This year in addition to regular duties the Publications Board assisted with Orientation and second semester registration, working particularly with transfer students.

The TOWER

Early in the year the Tower staff set out to arouse increased interest of the students, and succeeded in doing so by their clever convocation program, "The Princess Lacks a Page." This skit got over the idea that the Tower is all-student.

The staff was rewarded by the enthusiastic reception of the first issue. A striking cover in black and white conveyed the nature of the contents. Highlights of the issue were "The Confessions of a Rubber Band," a compilation of those all-absorbing freshmen autobiographies, and "Curtain Call," a new feature, which called the contributors to the last page for an introduction.

The competence of Editor Mary Sterne and her staff is evidenced by the fact that the only mistake to be found was that one letter on the front page was one millimeter off.

The ALABAMIAN

Every other Monday at least, all the students are sure that trips to the P. O. will not be in vain, because every box is stocked with the appropriate number of Alabamians.

Editor Lois Anne Smith and Business Manager Lucille Scott with an able and energetic staff have not only covered the news like professionals but have made a special effort to deal with student problems, and make the Alabamian more expressive of thought on the campus.

In the very first issue the Alabamian changed face with a new banner headline and new streamline type. An added feature was the Voice of the Campus where individual students and faculty members were given a chance to express opinions. In covering activities of different dramatic groups, reviews of all the plays produced on the campus have been written. In several spring issues a society page was included for the first time in the history of the paper.

The Alabamian supported the marriage relations course for seniors, the housing bureau, and backed the changing of the name of the yearbook to Montage.

ELITE NITE

OCTOBER 17, 1940

PALMER HALL

Though not a naturalist, Grace Jones did a bang-up job of the Elite Nite programs and set.

A mixture of Atlantic City (minus the bathing suits) and a fantasy featuring the magical tricks of a gnome—might describe Elite Nite.

In a skit, "Elite Flower Nite," a gnome brought the Elite candidates from a giant toadstool to the amazement of two backward scholars of Biology. After each girl had been properly "spotlighted" across the stage, the students transferred their attention from faces to names on ballots.

But now instead of settling back, everyone leaned forward and took new focus. For right there on the stage were Lamar Dodd and John Held Jr., the artist-judges, who were to pick from the sixty girls nominated by the students the sixteen most beautiful girls at Alabama College. This parade of feminine loveliness began as the fifteen nominees of each class appeared. Looking like exotic female spies (really to make the choosing impersonal) each girl wore a number. Finally, after many blitz conferences of the judges and excited applause of the audience, the students cheered both the artists and their sixteen most beautiful classmates.

Mild-mannered Lamar Dodd and bouncing, dynamic John Held Jr. confer—and finally get their widely different viewpoints into focus.

ORGANIZATIONS

REYNOLDS HALL

Through these portals go the members, officials, and emissaries of the campus organizations, for Reynolds Hall now serves as general headquarters for all extra-curricular activities—including receipt of mail and consumption of cokes. Here are the offices and meeting rooms of the clubs and publications, the experimental theater, lobby, and loafing porch. The very presence of a big well-equipped kitchen plus large and small dining rooms is reason enough that they should be used intensively and often.

Presidents' COUNCIL

OFFICERS

Nell Wooten	President
Lucille Scott	Secretary
Mary Margaret Peterson	Treasurer

At a meeting of the Presidents' Council you would find almost all the campus celebrities, for on its roll are the presidents of all college organizations. Because of their knack for whacking red tape and really getting things done, this group achieves its purpose of creating interest in extra-curricular activities, considering the formation of any new organization, and conducting business which relates to all student groups.

Aside from their duties of approving the applications of new organizations, endorsing their constitutions and by-laws, the Presidents' Council cooperates with affiliated groups to work out schedules of meetings and check with their treasurers in keeping records, sponsors the activity point system for recognition of non-curricular activities, and serves as a clearing house for any problems which the student groups may encounter.

Under the efficient leadership of Nell Wooten the Council has had a full year of activity. Last spring it sponsored the Honor's Day program and banquet to recognize students who belong to the honorary societies. At the annual Thanksgiving dinner it planned the entertainment and decorations for the dining room, and later gave a party for the whole student body. The Presidents' Council also joined with other campus groups in the drive for the World Student Service Fund.

ASSOCIATION for CHILDHOOD Education

Membership in the Association for Childhood Education is open to students and supervisors in the field of elementary education. Its members are interested in the small child and seek to encourage more progressive methods of childhood education.

This year the club sponsored a booth displaying literature published by the National Association at the A. C. E. convention in Birmingham. The most outstanding project of the year was the sponsoring of a series of lectures by Dr. Maycie Southall, of Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee.

Lambda Sigma Pi, senior women's honorary society, was established last year at Alabama College to recognize leadership, service, and personality on the campus. In four years this society will apply for admittance into the National Chapter of Mortar Board.

With Shirley Sneed as president, these girls have carried out a very active program. After the concert by Lansing Hatfield, they gave a reception in Tutwiler Hall honoring the faculty. Later this society set up a housing bureau to help students to accommodate their guests, especially during College Night. Lambda Sigma Pi also sponsored lectures on parliamentary procedure for the new members of the Presidents' Council.

Beta Beta Beta, honorary fraternity in Biology, was established on this campus last year. The purpose of the fraternity is to encourage the acquisition of scientific knowledge and an understanding of scientific research. Mr. C. G. Sharp and Dr. Zoe Black are faculty members of the club and serve as advisors.

This year the group approved the idea of a thorough classification of trees and shrubs on this campus as an educational project. The members have also learned the mechanism and technique involved in giving basal metabolism check-ups.

ORCHESTRA

The orchestra is made up of students of the School of Music and any other interested students who are accepted by the conductor after examination. Its object is to promote the acquaintance with, and appreciation of, good symphonic literature, whether it be through active participation as a member of the orchestra or as an appreciative listener.

Always one of the most active groups on the campus, the orchestra has played on several broadcasts, convocations, and presented a spring concert. Last year at the Dedication Exercises in April the orchestra contributed to the program, and this year they opened the Dancy Lecture Series.

DANCE GROUP

OFFICERS

Allee Robbins	President
Jean Farr	Vice-President

Charlotte Meinwald, Carolyn Raborn	Costume Chairmen

The Dance Group was organized to stimulate interest in the modern dance on the Alabama College campus and to provide a medium of expression for persons interested in the dance. A student may become a member of the Group if she has completed one semester of class work in the dance, and has been approved in try-out by a selected committee. Because of their originality and excellent technique, their programs are always anticipated with interest.

For the 1940 May Day program the Dance Group arranged and presented an interpretation of the rebirth of Peace which results when misunderstanding and the strife of war are overcome by grace, thought, and wisdom.

On January 27, under the direction of Miss Mildred Caldwell, the Group gave in recital "The Sleeping Princess," in which they interpreted the fairy tale of that name. In this program the choreography and the costumes were original creations of the members. During the A. E. A. Convention, the Group presented this same program before the Association of School Administrators.

GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club stimulates interest in ensemble singing and offers opportunity for study of choral music of all periods and schools. Membership in the Glee Club proper is based chiefly on the record of faithfulness to the work of the associate club, which is open to all students without examination.

AS HISTORICAL as the glass windows in our King House, as eventful as Thanksgiving Holidays, as unforgettable as College Night is a Midnight Feast at Alabama College.

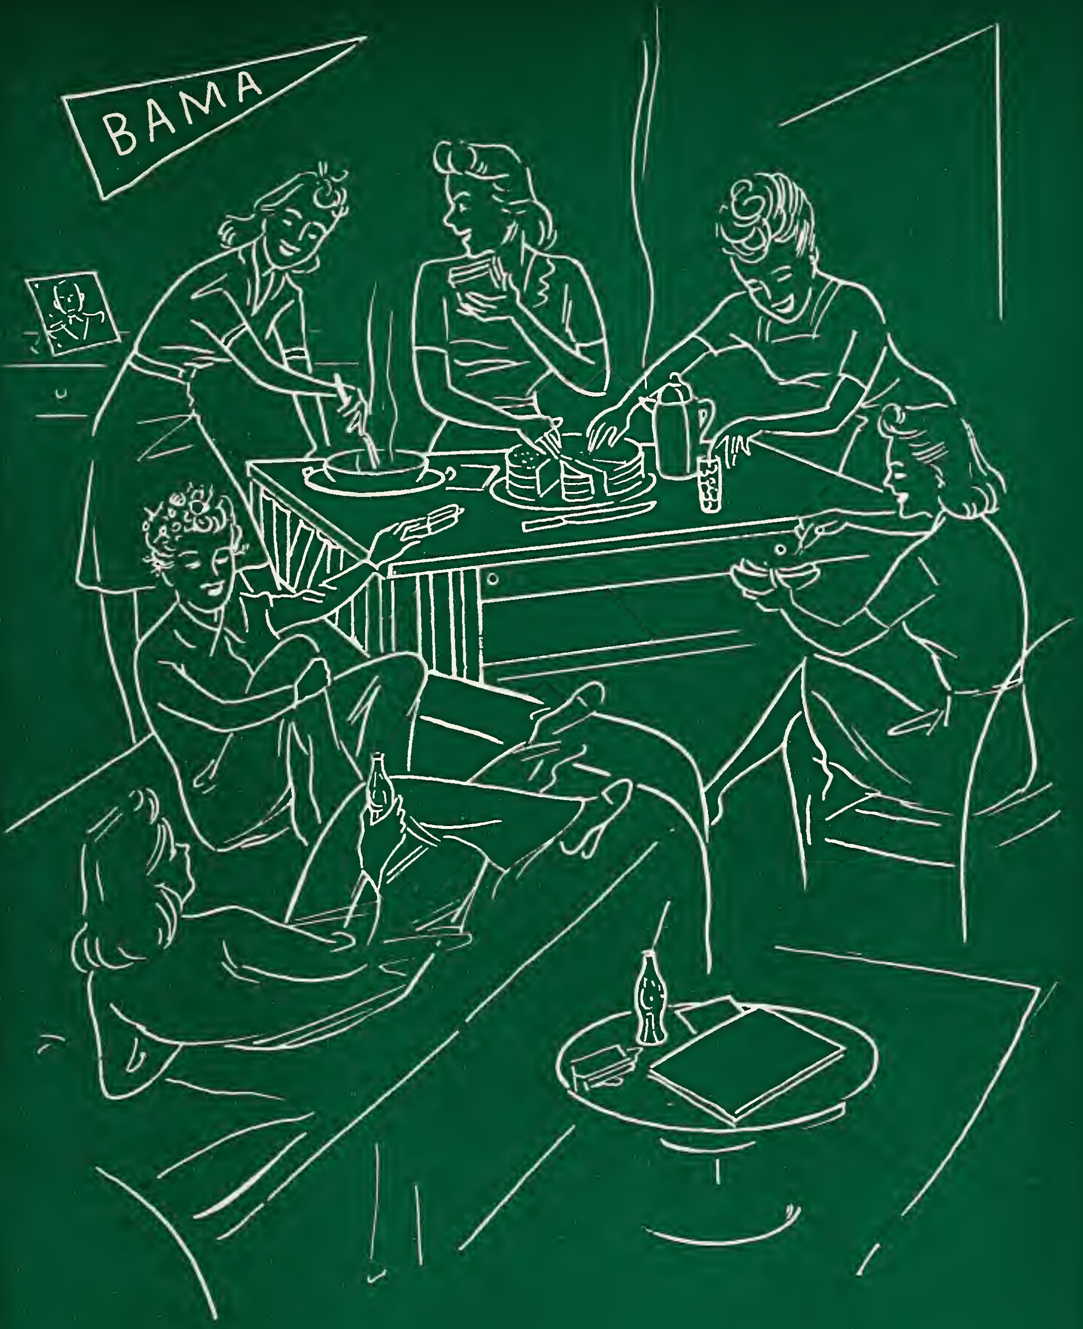
It is the electric drama of a room crowded with college girls, reveling in their favorite food and gossip, laughing hilariously at very ordinary jokes, and swapping tid-bits about their boy friends of the moment. Stripped of their lipstick, rougeless, they comfortably forget Emily Post and her stupid rules. Their hair though in tinny curlers is definitely down. How could one get closer to real living—or real food than this?

The spread is a work of art. Be it chili, cake, hamburgers, or divinity, washed down with weak tea, coffee grounds, or cokes, it has the same happy effect on all digestive juices concerned. Shrieks are muffled in mouths too full for talk, and laughter becomes a mere gurgle of contentment until skilled fingers have fished up the last forlorn olive, the last bit of sardines and crackers.

As for time there is no limit. The revelers may linger for hours, content to lie around the table like those old Romans, languidly lifting the last crumbs to their mouths. As a sop to tidiness, they may soak a few dishes, and then sleepy goodbyes are made—but made hintfully because other boxes from home are always in the offing. The last guest backs slowly out, mumbling her gratitude, and two sleepy girls climb into bed to toss fitfully among the cracker crumbs of the vanished feast.

Recreation

THE ART OF



MIDNIGHT FEASTING

The RECREATION ASSOCIATION

The Recreation Association is the new name adopted for the erstwhile Athletic Association. As this organization grew and branched into a wider variety of activities a new title was needed to cover the expanding program.

The Field House, framed through branches, from the upper campus.

Truly a democratic organization, the Recreation Association boasts complete student membership. This is adequately proved by the crowds of enthusiastic girls jitterbugging their hearts out at the dances sponsored by the Association. The Recreation Board, which Bobby Brabston has led so ably, is made up of the four officers, the class representatives, and councillors of all the sports.

The afternoon sports—softball, basketball, volley ball, and soccer; dances in the Field House and Tutwiler; badminton, ping pong, loop tennis, indoor bowling, horseshoes, skittleboard and shuffleboard equipment available in the Field House—all prove that this Association is recreation-conscious. During the winter months the Field House was open on Sunday afternoons for everyone with a yen to play. With true reforming zeal these lassies have given the Camp House a retouching. In the fall they entertained the annual meeting of the State Athletic Association.

FALL RECR

In the beginning, when a girl takes up her books after a beautiful summer of bathing suits and sailboats, (and dishwashing?), printed pages are heavy burdens. There's a mad scramble for the tennis courts and other recreational facilities.

It's kick, block, and dribble in the afternoon soccer games, with punted balls soaring from the impact of a well-aimed foot.

Now it's a bull's eye. Chins up, strings drawn tight, fingers release and an arrow flies through the air. There are plenty of enthusiastic amateurs who seek to puncture the target's face.

A flick of the wrist and it's over the net—they hope—badminton players swing their rackets and start the bird on its way.

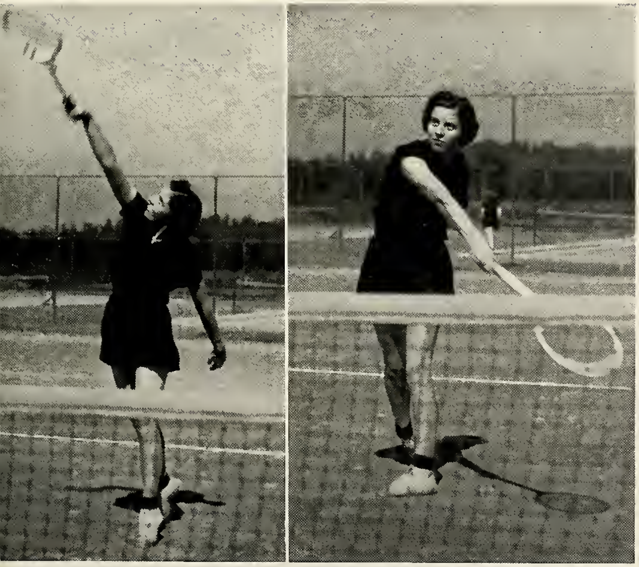
Rigging up for soccer . . . Don't mistreat the "birdie," Bobby . . . Ah, such form, me lassies . . . It shall not pass . . . Hm'm—two against one.

EATION

Some girls like them tall, dark and handsome and there are others who prefer the redheads and blondes—just as the preference for masculine company varies, so do individual tastes in sports. The Physical Education program for freshmen this year was designed to please the different choices. Badminton, darts, skittleboard, shuffleboard, volley ball and box hockey were the activities offered. Even though their badminton form might appear an atrocious rendition of ju-jitsu, they may redeem themselves with a whizzy ping pong serve.

Attention, gals, it's over the net . . . Kick it! It's pigskin.

Follow Through.



Darts and smiles.

WINT

REC

Far away from the daily shuttling between classroom, library, and lab, the Camp House offers a refuge for fevered brows. Fully equipped for all kinds of recreation, it's a popular spot for week-ends and over-night jaunts.

The culinary art, or lack of art, is brought out in the Camp kitchen where everyone must help cook or suffer hunger pangs. Whether the food is done to a crisp black, or whether its edges are soggy, it's consumed with gusto. Early morning treks over the hills to the College dairy to get milk for the hungry campers also sharpens the appetite.

From talking Miss Irvin out of the food to the inevitable pillow fights on the sleeping porch, everyone agrees that Camp is tops in fun.

Make it count! . . . Concentration in Camp . . . Let 'er fly.

ER

REATION

When old man Winter puffs his frosty breath he expects shivering femmes to seek shelter and knit contentedly in a steam-heated room. But here he runs smack up against defiance. The snow is rolled into hardened balls and the campus is a No Man's Land for the duration.

In the gymnasium building human sky-scrapers follow no blueprints when the architect uses figures for a foundation and lets the structure taper to a graceful peak. These are the pyramids made in tumbling. Others caper and roll into unbelievable shapes and sizes on the cushion-y mats.

In tap dancing feet click in staccato rhythm on a hardwood floor to the teacher's instruction of "brush, hop, step—brush, hop, step—."
Corrective gymnastics are for those confirmed optimists determined to straighten a lazy slump or get rid of a double chin.

Folk dancing causes the gym to reverberate with the noise of "swing your partner!" and after a hearty polka twice around the floor, a whiff of frosty air is an invigorating treat.

Winter sports do away with that tired feeling and give a talking point for the chill winds and nippy weather.

Arms, legs, and angles . . . Heel, tap, toe . . . Chin in, chest up, shoulders back . . . Four hands across and around we go.

SPRI
RECRE

Spring has come and the idea of spring fever and daintly-patted yawns went out with bustles and hoop skirts. Today it's the call for action.

Off for a tramp in the woods to get a wholesome whiff and a peek at the buds—into the drink with a splash and watch your over-arm—"Fore!" and off sails a golf ball—strike three and you're out.

Whether they want to walk barefoot in the new green grass, smash tennis balls or pick violets—spring has its appeal to be up and about.

Looks like we're winning this game . . . Swing it, Virginia! . . . After the fashion of Robin Hood . . . "Far from the maddening crowd."

Strike Three.

It'll be a triple or else!

Artificial respiration—good practice.

Water lilies.

The DANCE

Modern Dancing, more often called flitting when Miss Caldwell isn't around, is offered the whole year. The devotees of this art not only study movement and rhythm but such practical things as how to walk correctly and navigate steps with ease.

It might be called—Salute to the Sun.

Perfect equilibrium and gracefully done . . . Any passer-by can tell that the class is tripping outside today . . . Perfect landing after a whirl.

PLEASE NOTE

AFTER you leave Montevallo and find "the man of your choice," remember that a sure way to his heart is through a cup of good coffee . . . provided, of course, that the coffee you make is PERFECT. And it will be, too, if you use ROYAL CUP COFFEE.

IT GOES FURTHER — TASTES BETTER — LASTS LONGER

You learned to like ROYAL CUP COFFEE at Alabama College (they serve it each day in the dining room!) So ask your Grocer for it . . . at home.
